New mobile security service launched

TENCUBE has launched WaveSecure, a mobile security service designed to protect both mobile phone handsets and the data inside them, in the case of loss or theft. Among the different features offered by the service, WaveSecure enables users to remotely lock their phones upon losing it, making it useless to anyone who finds the phone. If the SIM card is changed, the new phone number will be reported back to the phone's rightful user. Any phone calls or messages will also be reported back, assisting the user in tracking down the phone. WaveSecure is currently available for a three-month trial by invitation only from its website at www.wavesecure.com.
